From The Editor:

Last meeting there were no newsletters to pick up at the meeting and the previous month's newsletters were mailed days before the meeting. I find these matters inexcusable in others as well as in myself. The fault is mine alone and I will try not to drop the ball for Dal-Ace again.

Sincerely,

July

8-Bit: Dave Gramm was our guide through the maze of (not quite nowadays) mind-bogglin' electronics inside our 8-bit machines that we were able to make sense of with the visuals provided by Rene Tucker. We still have those available, if any of you not attending want a copy. Send a SASE to Sandra, care of Dal-Ace. Dave said that Best Electronics carry all the parts, and that Electronics USA on Royal & Beltline in Dallas was a good place to find chips.

ST-Sig: Jay Wimmers showed us NeoDesk and I think all of us were impressed. Made us all hanker for an ST, and NeoDesk! Thanks, Jay. If you are interested in STs or programs for your ST, Jay can answer alot of your questions.

Main: Marc read a letter from a wayward Atariian in Italy (by way of NY) More on that in "From our Mail Bag".

Debbie talked to us about the new improvements in the BBs and Express. Handouts on that are also available for a 60-cent SASE. (It's 8 pages.) John Saunders, in charge of taking care of scheduling our meetings here at Infomart impressed upon us one more time, to redouble not only our efforts at getting new members, but that the membership needed to double, as well. Sign up that family, folks, or we won't have a nice place to meet next year. This is no joke. Dal-Ace bowling was tentively set for August 3rd. Auction for August meeting.

August 24

8-Bit: Demod was SeaStalker Text Adventure by Infocom. It's a type-in reply style, and you can save at least 8 different positions to protect yourself from 'incoming'. We all got some laughs and had a good time with the game. Next came Music Studio by Activision. Although not as intuitive as Music Construction set by Electronic Arts, for the musically inclined, it was the ticket. If you have knowledge of reading sheet music, you might consider the program when you come upon it.

Main: Bowling was cancelled due to The Pepsi State Tourney. September will possibly have a picnic or Putt-Putt. Sandra Hanna announced that she will step down from the Newsletter Editorship effective December (officer-election month) Bill Hanna said that he would remain on the job unless voted out of office. The BBS is now tied with 4 other BBS systems (local Fido-net). Loading may take another 20 seconds, so be patient. Also, news that the Atari 8-Bit Echo is coming. Several of our members brought up proof that Atari was indeed advertising! An ad for Paralegals showed a good ole Atari 800 on the desk of the successful businessperson! Plus, Wall Street Week mentioned Atari at the stock to buy because "they are getting out of the business and have lots of loose cash". Go figure. But, the good news—sorta—Terminator II showed a rather inventive use being made of Atari's handsome palmtop, the Portfolio. Go see it and find out what we're talking about!! Randy Smith brought up a neat ad by Goodman Music from L.A. showing Atari products. Jeff Golden told us that P&C Computer is moving and producing a new catalog.

Auction: If you missed this auction, you missed a great opportunity to get some of the best bargains of the year! $1.00 brought happy bidders the Music Construction Set, a disk drive case—for two drives, a Musical Christmas card (printable).

Craziest item: 3 Marvel (Computer-top) Characters went for $3.00. Best Buy: Atari printer for $27.00, and it works! Highest Bid: the printer. Betsy, as per rules (bent somewhat) was there and went for $10.00 to Sierra Hanna (again).

File Compression
by Manuel Garcia

If you own a modem, our are probably aware that computer programs are available on most bulletin boards (BBS) in their 'Files' section. When you check the files, you may notice the file names have extenders you are familiar with such as *.EXE, *.OBJ, *.TXT, and *.BAS. There may be a few you might not recognize, mainly *.ARC and *.DCM. In order to save memory space on their boards, sysops will carry files in a compressed state. In order to get these programs to run, you must uncompress these files. There are two different programs that will accomplish this, SuperUnArc (v1.0) for *.ARC files, and Disk Communicator (v3.2) for *.DCM files. Once you have downloaded a file from a BBS, it is a good idea to save the compressed version as a backup. Should something happen to your working copy, you can easily create another from the backup disk. You can even place multiple compressed files on the same disk and save even more space. Or you can use these programs to duplicate your entire library and use less disks that if you had a 1:1 ratio....Both SuperUnArc and DisCom... are menu drive, and are easy to understand. Once you load them, you can call up a disk directory, format a disk, set up for single or multiple drive systems as well as uncompress files. You can also reverse the process should you want to compress a file of yours to upload to the BBS.

(Dal-Ace has several of these programs in our disk library and/or on the BBS)

Mail Bag

Dal-Ace got a letter from Steven Thomas, Box 492, APD NY 09240, asking; "I can't seem to print a color picture in color. Pictures I do print seem to be in 9-pin quality, not 24. A friend of mine has the same printer and he prints beautiful color in 24-pin quality!!! Help!!!" Steven has 1040STF computer, SC1224 monitor, Megafile 30 hard drive, SF314, Citizen GSX 140 24-pin printer. Steven is interested in purchasing the Color ComputerEyes digitizer, but is waiting for his problem to be solved first. He has written many programmers and companies about the problem and has gotten NO response. If you fit one of these categories, give Steven a line. Steven does not evidently have a modem. Someone might suggest that item to him. I. owner of likeprinter and have no problem with printing, II. own ComputerEyes video digitizer, or

(We will pass this news to AUNT to help Steven in his quest.)
