Print type service

PARAGON Computers has established a Do-It-Yourself laser-printing service.

It uses the four most popular computerised publishing systems — IBM, Macintosh, Atari and Amiga.

Manager of the business, Phil Reeves, said clients can take their document disks to Paragon for printing on the newest Postscript-compatible QMS PS810 laser printer.

"An Apple Macintosh SE has been added to the existing Atari ST, Amiga and Atari PC2 IBM compatible hardware," said Mr Reeves.

"We can also perform page-makeup because we stock most desktop publishing and illustration software for all systems.

"Among other items in our range for the desktop publisher, we stock the CRP Graphics tablet for freehand drawing and diagram-tracing on the Mega ST and the astonishing Hawk CP 14, flatbed scanner.

"The Hawk is used by the team to insert photographs into publications."